

Mayasim Bajammal – Family and Child Studies – Child Development Specialist Undergraduate Student

After struggling for many years to find the best major and the best university, I have finally found a place that has met above and beyond my expectations in a university such as Louisiana Tech University. Being a student in the School of Human Ecology offers me many opportunities that are enriching my education experience. Additionally, the friendly atmosphere, the caring people and the ethics and professionalism are among the main characteristics that give our School that vital value. I feel so grateful and proud to be part of this family, and having my daughter studying in a preschool that is operated by my college has greatly increased the value of it in my life. Thank you School of Human Ecology for being a part of me and my family's path toward success!
