

Maya Johnson
Fashion Merchandising & Retail Studies

When asked how it is being a student in the School of Human Ecology, it triggered something special in my heart. The School of Human Ecology has bridged the gap between me and my future success. It has allotted me friendships, and created a home for me at Louisiana Tech. Here everyone knows me by first name and is always offering a helping hand. Like every major it has its difficulties; however, it challenges the students' inner professional, and forces he/she into their destiny. It also calls for a strong will and great creativity. Being a student in the School of Human Ecology is challenging, but it is where I belong.