

Mia Davis
Nursing

Hi! My name is Mia Davis and I am originally from Colorado Springs, Colorado.

I graduated from high school in 2014 and went to college in a small town in Tennessee for one year. During my time there I took an EMT class and got to experience being a part of an EMS team in rural America. Not only was I able to learn about so many interesting medical practices, I was also able to see, first hand, how many people suffer and struggle to find proper healthcare in our own country. It wasn't long before I began to feel as though I was truly being called to help and care for people. Becoming an RN became the next goal in my life plan, and choosing Louisiana Tech's Nursing Program to start the next chapter of my journey was a no-brainer. After researching program after program, LA Tech stood out to me through their 100% NCLEX pass rate and their helpful and kind staff.

Nursing is a trusted, honorable, and cherished profession and Louisiana Tech's Division of Nursing embodies these characteristics perfectly through the outstanding faculty, challenging curriculum, and driven students. I don't know where I would be today without all of the support I have received from my family of nursing students and faculty.

I still have a few more quarters to go before graduation and I'm glad about that, because everything I learn broadens my interests. I feel like I change my mind every day about what I want to do once I am officially an RN, but I take heart in knowing that a degree from Louisiana Tech's nursing program is preparing me to succeed in doing good work for others no matter what. I can't wait until I can say "I'm a Nurse," but until then, I am proud to say "I'm a Bulldog."
