

About me

My name is Kohl Brandon, and I am currently a junior at Louisiana Tech University majoring in Animal Science with a concentration in Pre-Veterinary Medicine. I grew up in West Monroe, Louisiana before moving to Ruston to attend Tech. I am the son of Tim and Jollie Brandon and the eldest of three having a younger brother, Kade, and younger sister, Kiley. Above anything else in my life, I am a Christian and Jesus is everything to me. Hunting, fishing, and sports are some of my hobbies, but I spend the majority of my time either at the library studying, in bible studies, or participating in the various clubs of which I am a member.

Why Animal Science?

I have always had a passion for animals as well as people, and from this I attribute my desire to pursue a career in veterinary medicine. When I wake up in the morning, I know the calling to be a veterinarian has been placed on my heart because it is something that pulls me towards itself and not something I have to push myself to do. The numerous hours in the library, hard work, and sacrifices I have made along the way have in no way, shape, or form been easy, yet I have loved every single minute of the journey. It is truly a blessing to have the ability to wake up every day and work towards my dream of becoming a veterinarian.

Mentors

Throughout my life, I have had many influential people help guide me on my journey, with God being number one on my list. I know through the highs and lows of my life, He remains constant and is always guiding my steps. The support and love of my parents have been one of the biggest blessings in my life as well. My mom is always quick to give me advice in tough situations; while my dad instilled in me a strong work ethic reminding me to give nothing but the very best I have in every situation life throws at me. I am also very thankful for Dr. Mark Murphey and Dr. William Green. They have pushed me academically in the classroom, yet they have also taken the time to get to know me personally, listened when I needed someone to talk to, and have always been willing to help me in any way possible. I am thankful for these people as well as everyone else who has played a part in molding me into the person I am today.

Quote:

Matthew 6:33 "But seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things will be added to you."