To:

On behalf of the School of Agricultural Sciences and Forestry, I welcome you to the 52nd annual Farm Production Sale at Louisiana Tech University. This event is part of what makes spring on South Campus such an exciting time. Just a few weeks ago, we recognized some of our outstanding students with scholarship awards, and we will be able to do that again next year because of the support and generosity of all of you. Today's sale also gives us an opportunity to enhance our farm facilities for teaching, research, and engagement with the community. Thank you for being part of this special event that makes a direct impact on the academic success of our students.

Sincerely,

D. Paul Jackson, Ph.D.

Changing of the Guard

After decades of dedicated service to agriculture and Tech Farm, farm manager Waggoner Russell and livestock manager Benny Hennen have officially hung up their hats and spurs to step into a well-earned retirement. Known for their calm demeanor, deep knowledge, and unwavering kindness, both men were more than just leaders on the farm—they were mentors, father figures, and the steady hands that kept everything running smoothly. Their presence brought a quiet assurance to those around them, and their legacy on Tech Farm is forever embedded.

Waggoner & Benny

Now, they've passed the torch to two younger men - farm manager Colby Bass and livestock manager Tyler Homann. Colby and Tyler have stepped into their new roles with humility and confidence, carrying forward the values of compassion, hard work, and quiet leadership, much like their predecessors. Both bring fresh energy and a deep-rooted respect for the traditions that shaped Tech Farm.

Much like Waggoner and Benny, Colby and Tyler have a knack for problem-solving, innovation, and are always looking for ways to improve the farm while preserving its core values. Together, they make a dynamic team—balancing experience with vision, tradition with progress.

Colby & Tyler

Though we will miss Waggoner and Benny, there's comfort in knowing they've left the farm in the capable and caring hands of Colby and Tyler.
